The program, delivered by some of the top coaches and specialists in the game, is aimed at providing an opportunity for Australian Football coaches, particularly senior and youth coaches, access to the most up to date coaching methods and practices with the opportunity to enhance their coaching and provide better quality programs and learning environments for their players.

The program includes practical sessions and formal presentations from experts on their areas of coaching. The conference theme, 'Coaching Effectiveness', focuses on strategies to ensure coaches are effectively delivering on their coaching goals and objectives. The program will also outline physical and skill development techniques for players, high performance management planning, as well as team and coach development. There are sessions for all coaches from youth levels all the way through to senior coaches, high performance managers and fitness specialists.

The program includes six outstanding key note addresses and 36 optional presentations and workshops spread over six sessions delivered by AFL Club coaching staff, former coaches and other specialists from football development programs, Institutes of Sport and management programs. Victoria

More than 260 guests attended the MCG for the 21st annual Australian Football Coaches Association Awards (Victoria) on November 7 that included an address by four-time AFL premiership coach David Parkin (right).

AFL Victoria Coaching Development Manager Steve Teakel said more than 60 coaches had been recognised by their regional AFCA branch for excellence in coaching. From there, 15 Victorian finalists were chosen across five award categories.

"The Victorian AFCA awards night provides an opportunity to celebrate football at all levels and to acknowledge the significant role coaches play in the development of individual players and teams," Teakel said.

The Victorian AFCA winners were:

NAB AFL Auskick Coach of the Year:

Phillip Murdoch - Fitzroy Carlton Auskick

"Phillip has been a Leader Coach at the Fitzroy Carlton Auskick for the past four years where he has demonstrated a sound and consistent leadership to his parent helper coaches and the Auskickers under his care. He is well organised, always clear in his plan for the session and builds upon the skills taught previously."

Greg Sharp - St. Mary's Junior Football Netball Club in Seymour

"Greg is a well respected coach at the St. Mary's Junior Football Netball Club where he not only coached the Under-12 team, but acted as mentor for other coaches and players alike. The coaches show much respect for Greg and use his advice and strategies to improve not only their own coaching but the development of the players under their guidance."

Youth Coach of the Year:

Joel Farrelly - Ferntree Gully Eagles Junior Football Club

"Joel has coached a team in every age group (Under-9 to Under-16) and for 10 consecutive years at the Ferntree Gully Eagles Junior Football Club. As well as being a coach he has also undertaken the Coaching Coordinator role where he has introduced a range of strategies to develop his team of coaches and a skill development and assessment model for the players. Joel has a player centred coaching philosophy which is based on getting to know each of his players, identifying their strengths and weaknesses and preparing a plan to further develop their football skills."

Female Coach of the Year:

Keltie Blake - Montrose Junior Football Club

"Keltie is passionate about her football being a qualified umpire, trainer and coach. Her coaching career commenced last year as the Montrose Under-9s coach and was reappointed to coach the Under-10s this year. In 2008, she successfully made a presentation to the Montrose Football Club about establishing and coaching the Montrose Youth Girls team. Over the season, the opposition complimented the team on its team spirit on and off the ground which was credit to Keltie and her coaching style."

Jason Lappin - Wangaratta Football Netball Club

"Jason coached Wangaratta to their first premierships for 32 years in 2007 and went back-to-back in 2008. He has based his success on a team style with each individual understanding their playing role and training geared to reflect match day expectations. Coaching the players to be actively involved in developing the game plan reinforces a team approach and spreads the leadership responsibility amongst the group. His preparation for match day is meticulous with dossiers on the opposition – focusing on game style, individual players and key match ups."

AFLCA & AFL agreement to bolster coach development

THE AFL and the AFL Coaches Association have signed a formal agreement that will allow the two parties to better combine their efforts to both grow the game and enhance the professionalism of coaches at all levels of the sport.

Under the terms of the agreement the AFL will provide funding to the Coaches Association which will be used to implement a range of programs including state and community development, tertiary education and career transition assistance.

In return, over and above the normal demands of their positions, the AFL's 16 senior coaches will assist the League in its efforts to grow the game by giving their time and expertise to key development initiatives.

AFLCA chief executive Danny Frawley (right) said the AFLCA's key priorities for the 16 senior AFL coaches, more than 90 assistants and the many hundreds of coaches across grassroots football, would be to:

- o provide a forum for coaches to discuss opportunities and challenges;
- o recognise leadership and excellence in coaching;
- o develop skills and expertise for all coaches, and particularly assistant coaches;
- o provide career transition and support to coaches and assistant coaches, both into and out of coaching;
- o define coaching pathways and develop talent;
- o promote coaching as a profession.

"AFL coaches have a vast bank of knowledge that we can tap into for the good of the game, and we need to work better to build relationships to promote the coaching profession," Frawley said.

"We are delighted to have reached this agreement with the AFL, which will be about developing the skills and expertise of AFL coaches and those hoping to make a career out of coaching.

"As part of this agreement, AFL coaches and assistant coaches will further work towards promoting our game, and ensuring it retains its position as our leading sport."

The AFLCA aims to define clearer pathways into coaching and develop the skills of coaches from the grass roots level up with a new Association website to be built in the coming weeks as part of the effort to achieve those goals.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!
